THE LISTING ATTIC

by Don Tucker

Picking a lover can be very precarious. These days with all the gay costuming and posturing from leather to Izod, it's sometimes difficult to tell what you're getting into.

What might appear to be a very put together preppy across the table at Crazy Ray's could turn out to be the Pig Woman from Pine Mountain two weeks into the trist.

Here are some helpful hints that could prevent you from getting irreversibly tied to a slob or a neurotic.

If you're attracted to transvestites or drag queens ask yourself these questions:

When she washes out her panty hose does she only wash the crotch and the feet?

When people come to her house for a party do they go next door to use the bathroom?

Does her shower have a ring?

If you have found an Emory graduate student who reads you the "Conversation Poems" of Whittier and generally makes you long for the Brontes, look out for these tell-tale signs.

When he wears a V-neck sweater does he press only the collar and the cuffs of the shirt underneath?

Does he sniff his socks before he puts them on?

When he chooses underwear from the closet floor does he determine the front of the jocky shorts by looking for the brown stains?

Does he wear a tie only when his shirt collar is dirty?

When his sister got married was he so busy groping wedding guests that he caught the bouquet in his teeth?

Does he turn his glass upside down to let you know that he needs a drink?

And when he tries to commit suicide during his finals does he boil the razor blade so he wouldn't get an infection?

Get out of the relationship.

Have you fallen in love with Matilda the Hun ... that big lumbering leather number next door that deals? Stop and think.

Does his smoke alarm have a snooze button or call waiting?

When he cleans his house does he rake his apartment?

When he snores does his nose whistle?

When he takes communion does he go back for seconds?

Does his breath smell like he used anchovie toothpaste?

Does he remind you of the people you see at the Burger King?

When you go out to eat and the waiter asks him what kind of dressing he wants on his salad, does he say Wishbone?

When you asked him if he would like some caviar, did he say I'll try one.

Does his hair look as if he combed it with a towel.

Well, Dear, change your name and skip town. It won't work.

So you've met Mr. Wonderful. He looks straight and has just divorced his wife of twelve years. Well, look a little deeper.

Has he just discovered Tiffany lampshades?

Does he have a fishing hat made from old Schlitz cans?

Is his idea of fine wine Mateus rose?

Does he think being black is a decision?

Does he think AIDS is for stranded travelers?

Does he make up his own motel bed?

Does he jump rope with jumper cables?

Did he think "Walking Tall" was a courageous movie?

Did he write the word true in the margin of "T.V. Guide" by Paul Harvey's name?

Does he think about funny things he would do if he was invisible?

Well, Love, he will wake you up one morning with a chain saw.

Does he stencil SKYLAB on his trash bags and throw them out of his car?

Well, Dear, you better hit the road and don't forget: The right person for you is probably the one you just threw out.

Dear
Diamond
Lil,

Have you every felt that you were different, or just didn't fit in? Are you aware that there are many others who think and feel the same way? Do you know that a feeling of not belonging could lead towards a self-destructive and rebellious behavioral pattern? Until we can get a handle on who we are and that we really do belong (regardless of what we might have heard otherwise), we could be in some serious trouble - mentally and emotionally. This column is presented for you, the readers; and we appreciate your feedback and letters very much. Won't you please share with us by writing Dear Diamond Lil, c/o R & R Publications, Inc., 729 Piedmont Ave. NE, Atlanta, GA 30308. The following are some excerpts and comments from letters I have received that I would like to share with you children:

Dear Diamond Lil,

I'm writing to you in hopes that you might do me a favor. The letter you responded to in Cruise Weekly, signed "Lonely in Athens," caught my attention, for I, too, am 23 years old and trying to live a Christian life. I have loved, but did not receive love in return. I thought maybe I could give you my address and phone number, and you could forward it to this guy in Athens, Ga., before he moves. I would like to become his friend through letters and phone calls. He and I may be able to help each other through depressing times.

It may seem strange, but I think that God meant for me to pick up the Cruise Weekly when I was in Birmingham and read your article, and then for me to try to get in touch with this guy, if at all possible. If you could do this for me, I would greatly appreciate your efforts; and please continue your column for you sound from your answers and responses, Diamond Lil, that you are one in a million.

Looking for a Friend
T.J.

Dearest T.J.,

Sweetheart, I have of course, forwarded your letter to Athens. Although you didn't say whether or not you wanted your letter printed here, I found your message too important and pertinent to the gay community, not to mention its heartfelt poignancy, to be overlooked.

I sincerely feel you have touched more than you will ever know; and you have my deepest apologies if I have taken the wrong liberty; but I felt like sharing is so imperative here.

With love, joy and peace from your friend,
Diamond Lil

Dear Princess Di,

Excuse me, I meant Diamond Lil. You are a priceless Princess, you know. I enjoy reading your column much and am glad there is someone of your caliber out there to help us thru our problems of life, liberty, and the pursuit of being gay ...

Thanks so much,
Robert

Dear Miss Lil,

... I have finally, after seven years, decided that it is high time to write to you personally and to thank you for several wonderful things ...

One thing I want to thank you for is the very level-headed advice I see you give in Cruise. I am thirty-four years old and have been out for thousands of years (or so it seems since I was in a life-long relationship with my ... brother until we were twenty-two or so) and I know that many gay people have very traumatic times, not only with coming out but also with coping with the problems peculiar to our life-style. I think that I have run into every kind of pretense and hang-up in dealing with folks in the gay community. It is not, however, their fault since they are dealing with a society which says that we are sick and any mechanism for coping is to be prized. You, however, never fail to hit the nail on the head and always give advice that is sensible and caring. All those things only confirm that you are indeed a wonderful person. For this I give you my sincerest thanks.

Sincerely,

Dear Lil,

I've often read your column and decided you missed one of your callings - ever thought of becoming a matchmaker? You know, like Dolly in "Hello, Dolly?" ...

Take care,
W.K.

Dearest Readers,

There are no words I can say after reading the above letters. After spending hours at the typewriter, suddenly every stroke of each key has a meaning and a purpose.

One day at a time, I will do my best to share my experience, strength, and hope with each of you in the community. If but one person is helped, we have succeeded.

I love you all,
Diamond Lil

P.S. Steve Routt of WRFG, 89.3 FM, has suggested that he would like to air one letter from this column on the 1st Sunday of each month on his show, "Southern Gay Dreams," from 8 to 9pm. Children, I know you won't want to miss this, so mark your calendars quickly! And, if you'd like to visit with Miss Diamond in person, you can find her every Monday night at 9:30 at Gregory's in Ansley Mall. See you there!

God made the Day,
God made the Night,
God made me Gay,
And that's All Right.

It was only a splash of graffiti scribbled on the toilet wall by some drunken patron, but for me it carried a powerful message, "God made me Gay, but that's all right."

Obviously the writer had faced the trauma, the anguish, the emotional highs and lows of coming out, and wanted the world to know he accepted his gayness. We must assume he felt he was ready to face life as a recognized homosexual.

Doubtlessly most of you readers would put yourselves in the same category. You are secure in your own lifestyle. You accept the hand that God has dealt you and rarely remember those terrifying days when you had to face the fact that you were somehow different from certain friends and family and realized that your version of the great American dream might not include marriage, children and a traditional family.

But wait, let's each of us examine ourselves a little closer. Just how far out of the closet have we come? Can you afford to allow your fellow workers to know your sexual persuasion or must you still brag about that blue-eyed honey you picked up at the bar on Friday night as if her were of the opposite gender? Can you be open with your family, bringing home your friends and/or lovers without explanation or apology? Are you willing to march in the Gay Pride Parade or wear a Gay Pride T-shirt?

The answer is different for each of us but there is little doubt that the more open we can be about our gayness, the happier and more relaxed our lives become. Wearing the mast at work, around non-gay friends, or even with our family always leads to tensions. Taking it off may produce confrontations but sometimes it is better to have these over with and get on with living. If we truly believe the "God made me Gay, and that's all right," we can do these things at the proper time in the proper ways to reduce the tensions in our always hectic lives.

Receptiveness can lead to understanding; understanding can bring trust; and trust can turn to love. The receptiveness is there, certainly not in every "born-again" heart, but amongst the media, many liberal politicians, and a surprisingly large segment of the general population. But it is up to us to promote understanding. We must be willing to work both individually and collectively to promote a positive image of gay men and women. We don't have to give up our leather or our drag or our unusual sexual practices, because these are things we can do in private or in our own enclaves. But we should avoid flouting out differences and emphasize the fact that, in many ways, we are just like our non-gay brothers and sisters. I am always embarrassed by showy queens who insist on camping and describing their latest sexual encounter in graphic detail in front of disapproving non-gays. Such encounters only reenforce bigotry and homophobia and encourage support for Jerry Falwell and others of his ilk who would pray or legislate us all back into the dark ages.

But you say, "I'm gay and I'm different and I'm proud of that, so why should I bother trying to convince the heteros that I'm like them?" The point is to stress the similarities and not the differences between non-gays and gays.

Understanding leads to trust and when a majority of the voting public understands that the one thing gays want above all other is to be allowed to live our lives, not as pariahs and second class citizens, but as contributing members of society, free from prejudice and discrimination, then we will be making true progress. We must erase the myth that we are militants seeking to seduce their sons and daughters into our way of life, and we must correct the false impression that child molestation, kidnapping and murder are the result of a liberalized attitude toward homosexuality when it is actually just the opposite. These things are the product of twisted minds made sick by prejudice, hatred and a large serving of Judaeo-Christian guilt.

With these myths removed and an understanding that gays are just a cross section of the general population groping with many of the same problems they have, the public will come to trust us — trust us to teach their children, the participate freely and openly in sports, to serve our country in the armed forces and our communities in political posts.

Many gays have already done these things with the trust and love of their communities, but few have been able to do it openly as gays. My high school band director was gay but he wore the mask so well I never suspected until years later when I was able to look back and compare his attitudes and actions with my own. An excellent teacher and band director, he was loved and revered by the community for years, but one day, some ten or fifteen years after I graduated, the cat somehow got out of the bag and he left. There was no scandal. No child had been harmed. But some purde who thought it their duty to protect the community learned the truth and forced his resignation. What a waste, and what a sad commentary on trust and love!

In a recent interview, author Armistead Maupin said, "There is a gay community (but) it's a community of individuals and each one of those individuals has a responsibility to be honest about who he or she is to the rest of the world. No one's going to do it for us. We're our own liberators!"

And so it must be. As we celebrate Gay Pride 1983, let's each examine our own inner feelings and reaffirm that "God mad me Gay and that's all right." Then let's reach out and touch the lives of friends, family and associates in a positive way, promoting understanding and love, working toward that ultimate day when everyone will associate the word Gay with its true meaning, joyous and lively, and no one will think it means queer.

JUDY GARLAND
JUNE 10, 1922 - JUNE 22, 1969

Judy Garland, the beloved, legendary star sang, "I Could Go On Singing, till the Cows Come Home," in her last movie. Little did she realize that fifteen years after her death she would still be singing. "Born in a trunk in the Princess Theater," Judy was a trooper at three and toured Vaudeville with Mom and Dad and her two sisters, stealing the show. The Academy Award-winning film classic, "Wizard of Oz," remains the most viewed film of all time. It is shown regularly as a special all over the world to be viewed by millions each time. The MGM musicals she made with Mickey Rooney are now shown on both public and pay TV, increasing her viewing public. She broke many box office records with her concerts. The 1961 Carnegie Hall Concert was the Theatre's greatest triumph. The Capitol recording of that concert revolutionized the recording business, and her records are still in great demand.

Darling little Dorothy is still singing and dancing into the hearts of a new generation. As long as there's a rainbow in heaven, the music and the magic of Judy Garland will keep our hearts singing forever.

In one of her most recent performances, Miss Spraggins closed cabaret night at the Atlanta Arts Festival in Piedmont Park. She has also been a regular at the Plush Room in the Hotel York and has appeared at nearly every major Atlanta cabaret. She has also appeared in nightclubs in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Los Angeles. According to a review by Joseph Litsch, Liz reaches her "spine-tingling peak" with an "emotion-packed rendition of Stevie Wonder's 'Lately.'" and is now taking the big step and going into pop music.

Having already developed a loyal following due to her weekend appearances in the lounge at Saint on Cheshire Bridge, Robin performs a varied repertoire of blues, jazz and pop, including several of her original works as well.

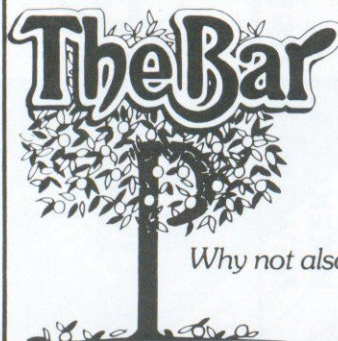

An impressive background of performances includes singing at Lincoln Center, the United Nations and the Bermuda Music Festival. She was also a nominee for the Bronze Jubilee Award in 1982.

This dynamite, new singer will be appearing at the Plush Room in the Hotel York on Mondays during the month of June. Shows are at 9:30pm.

twelfth season this northeastern Alabama city hosts the Alabama Shakespeare Festival, a professional theatre company of over 100 dedicated artists, designers and craftsmen. From as far away as Alaska or as near as Atlanta, from California, New York and all points in between, they home in on Anniston. The saws are buzzing to build the sets, the needles are flying in the costume shop, and rehearsal halls around the city are humming with excitement. Everywhere in town the whirl of activity is aimed toward creating the magical worlds of theatre.

The season opens July 10th and runs through August 21st. The Box Office has opened for business at Anniston High School, 12th Street and Woodstock Ave., from 10am to 6pm, Tuesday through Saturday. Charge card orders are being accepted by phone at 205 237-2332. Mail orders can be sent to: ASF Box Office, PO Box 141, Anniston, AL 36202. Tickets are $13.50 and $11, with substantial discounts available for season subscribers and groups.

May 31st was the kickoff for the third annual ASF Telephone Campaign. Through July 10th, members of the community and Festival volunteers will be contacting people over a five-state area, offering subscription packages and single tickets to this summer's season.

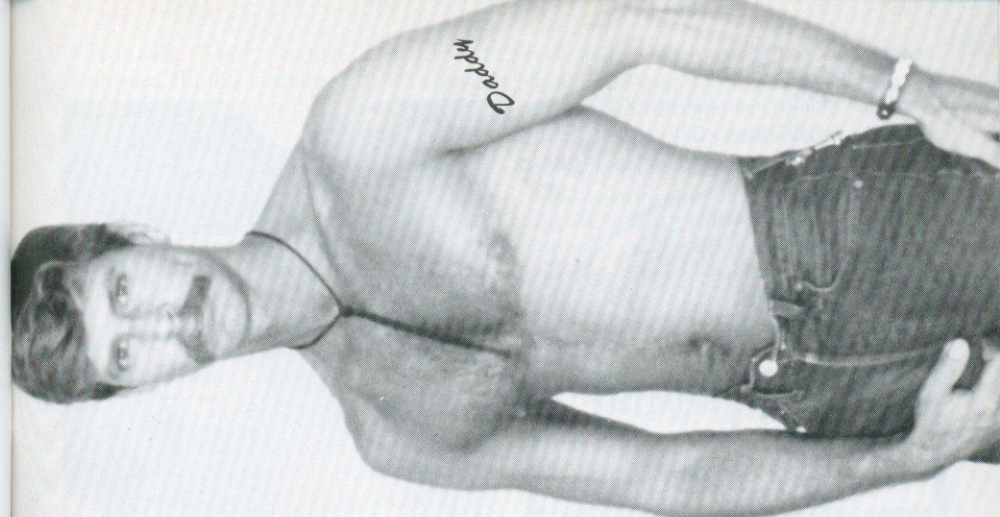

The five plays to be presented at ASF are Shakespeare's tragedy "King Lear" and the comedies "The Taming of the Shrew" and "All's Well that Ends Well"; Shaw's comedy "Arms and the Man"; and the recent Broadway hit, "Mass Appeal," by Bill C. Davis.

Further information and schedules are available from the Box Office, 205 237-2332.

America through a group of marvelous characters. Ernestine, the telephone operator, and Edith Ann, the five-year-old philosopher, are familiar from "Laugh-In," the top rated TV hit of the early 70's. An irrepressible shopping bag woman named Tess; Crystal, the indomitable hand-gliding quadruplegic; Ricke, the macho singles bar cruiser; organist extraordinaire of the Starlight lounge Bobbi-Jeanine; Glenna, flower child of the Sixties, the joyful Sister Boogie Woman; and the earnest housewife Mrs. Judith Beasley of Calumet, Illinois, are some of the colorful additions to the cast.

"Appearing Nitely" was a sell-out on Broadway. Clive Barnes described the show as "Fantasy gone sane ... energy like a rubber band ... her talent is astonishing!" Walter Kerr raved, "(Her) talent is authentic and enormous ... richly entertaining!" And the Hollywood Reporter pronounced, "Lily Tomlin is the greatest solo performer in the theatre today."

Lily Tomlin in "Appearing Nitely" has toured all over the country to universally enthusiastic audiences. Atlantans will have the pleasure of seeing this unique performer in a smaller and more intimate house than the 2,000 to 3,000-seat houses she usually plays.

All performances will take place at 7:30pm at the Alliance Theatre on 15th and Peachtree Streets in Atlanta. Tickets for the preview on Tuesday, July 5th are $8.50 and $10. Wednesday and Thursday nights are $10 and $15. Friday and Saturday nights are $14 and $17.50. Tickets are available at the Alliance box office or by calling 892-2414.

Lily Tomlin in "Appearing Nitely" is recommended for mature audiences of all ages.

BUFFALO CHIPS CELEBRATE 3rd ANNIVERSARY

Atlanta's high-stepping, all-male, clogging team, The Buffalo Chips, will celebrate their 3rd anniversary with two shows on Monday, June 20th at Illusions.

The shows, which will start at 11pm and 1:30am, will chronicle the Chip's rapid success and preview future performance plans. Special guest stars for the occasion will be the Stagehands, a talented, dynamic group who target their performing skills for hearing impaired audiences.

Admission for the evening will be $1. The Chips encourage everyone to join their party!
