Illusions bartenders Herman, John and Pate keep their always packed Monday Night Madness crowds happy.

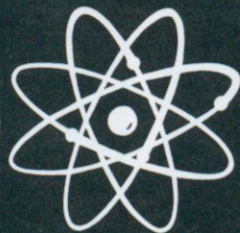

The crowds were crazy about "Lime" at their concert at Backstreet Sunday evening.

Lisa Capri, winner of the Pharr Library's "Creature Feature" finals, donated $50 of her winnings to AID Atlanta.

Not only did Mickey pack the house for her special, "Every Day's a Holiday with Mickey Day and Friends," at Illusions last Monday, but as you can see there wasn't much room in the dressing room that evening.

Dear Diamond Lil,

Are we allowing other people to upset our serenity? Can we actually release old ideas for new ones? Are we caught up in past mistakes? Have we been good to ourselves today? Have we done ourselves and others any special favors for this joyful holiday season? Have we elected to sit in our own squalor not knowing what to do? Please, if any of you children aren't feeling quite up to snuff, or if you're on top of it all, why not let us hear by penning a letter to Dear Diamond Lil, c/o R & R Publications, 729 Piedmont Ave. NE, Atlanta, GA 30308. Remember, an empty stocking might be filled today!

Dear Diamond Lil:

I feel it is time to ask you for your advice about a very serious situation that is getting worse on a weekly basis. Please advise me.

I broke up with a guy about 4 months ago, in a very ugly and dramatic way (you know the kind) and since then, he has been waging a World War in my direction.

What I mean by that is, he has been calling up ALL my friends (most of whom he has NEVER met), and writing them notes, and asking all kinds of questions about me and my life. Now, that isn't too bad, but it has begun to be Long Distance dialing, too. When friends of mine from 2,000 miles away call me and tell me this guy (usually drunk) has called them at 3 in the morning to discuss what a jerk I am, I begin to get a little upset. I confronted him, and he simply said he was "trying to understand me."

Now, the topper is that he has called my parents and my 16 year old sister, and asked them personal questions about me, and told them about my life in the "bars." My family has gotten these calls rather late at night, and they are now not just upset, but worried that this guy is dangerous.

To make this complete, he has gone to the bars where I usually hang out, and is trying to "enlist" my friends in a pact to boycott me. Now, what we did in our relationship, and in our life together, was in no way horrible; just another relationship that did not make it. This guy has had some bad relationships in the past, and has been jerked over quite a few times by other people. I am beginning to feel like Angie Dickinson in "Dressed to Kill."

Please tell me what I can do to settle this thing down.

I am losing my noodle.

Signed,
Spaghetti in D.C.

Dear "Spaghetti in D.C.,"

We, of course, know who has the real problem here, right? And, wouldn't it be best if we let it remain with that person? Why, certainly so! We'll start by not feeding any more fuel to the fire.

As long as you appear affected or upset by this guy's misbehavings, he'll probably continue this annoyance — for, you see, he's getting the attention he wants at this time to feed his wounded pride and ego. However, if you can act neutral, unbothered, and aloof to his outbursts, they'll simmer down and disappear a lot quicker than you think. This babe is feeling so much rejection that he is reaching out to anyone who knows you to use them as a sounding board. If this activity is not dying down by this time and you feel you want to put more of a curb on it, advise your parents and your long-distance friends to promptly hang up on this lad when he calls, for they really have nothing to say to him anyway.

I'm sure your friends in the bars know who the troublemaker is in this case and won't boycott you. If they're that easily influenced by his mouth and do, you need to move on to more meaningful associates. If you have permanently decided to give up this guy, move forward with your own life and get out of the spaghetti pot. Remember, the more you stir in the cauldron, the thicker it gets!

Love with a little less tabasco,
Diamond Lil

Dear Diamond Lil,

I have to sympathize with J.W. who wrote last week that "real men" and those over thirty have no place to go in Atlanta. It's true! Most of the bars do cater to the young disco darlings and it does get boring, standing on the sidelines, watching. And I love the bars — despite my occasional criticism: I wish I had a dime on every dollar I've spent in gay bars — I could retire to Palm beach and buy a boyfriend!

But even if there were a nice, quiet, old-fashioned cocktail lounge in town — I wonder if it would work? Gays of all ages have become so used to deafening stereo in bars that conversation above the "Is-that-a-Polo, you-look-pale, do-you-have-AIDS, your-place-or-mine?" level is impossible!

And do we have anything to say to each other anymore — beyond "dish" and "opinions" of the Time magazine mentality?

Back in the stone age of gay life, "B.D." (Before Disco) when all gay bars were dark, secluded and rather quiet affairs, almost all the entertainment available was conversation. I can't imagine that disco has killed it all — there are doctors, lawyers, scientists, artists, writers, et cetera, in the Atlanta gay community, and some interesting students, too — this is a college town.

I'd welcome that old-fashioned, non-disco, "... quiet, comfortable, friendly place ..." J.W. pines about where one could go and just talk! I mean, I know what's in your jockey shorts, Buster — I want to know what's in your brain.

What do you think, Lil?

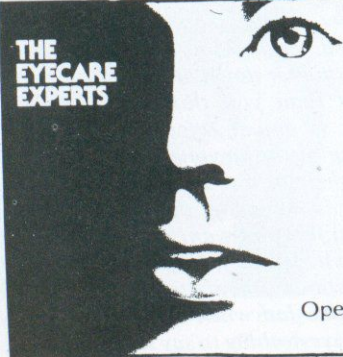

Sincerely,
Alexander Wallace

Dear Alexander,

Well, I'm with you, honey. The days of the jukebox and Dinah Washington's "What a Difference a Day Makes" need to be reinstated. Perhaps Linda Ronstadt's "What's New?" will inspire a new trend in music that will slow the disco pace down a bit and bring about a slower-paced bar or two. A well-balanced variety is definitely in order. We need both!

With love and joy and a Happy Holiday,
Diamond Lil

THE LISTING ATTIC

by DON TUCKER

You've probably already hear by now, but in case you haven't—Diamond Lil has been nominated for a Grammy for her record "Silver Grill." She's only slightly peaved that it was entered in the "Comedy/Satire" category. Let's face it, who cares if it's a complex new theory or a loaf of raisin bread that wins you the Nobel Prize? A Grammy is a Grammy! Congratulations, Lil! (Lil is competing with Joan Rivers, Robin Williams, Eddie Murphy, etc.!)

I was just thinking, somebody should start the "Grammy Awards" to recognize outstanding old queens. (If you could get them to admit it! I'm going to get killed for this but I can't resist!)

I would like to nominate Billy Jones for the "Lucille Ball Memorial Carrot Hair/Hat Medical Research Award" for his outstanding contribution to dye research.

I would like to nominate Walt Adams for his last performance of his "Annual Retirement and Farewell Address." And we will all be looking forward to his next bar.

I would like to nominate Frank Powell, first of all, for just being Frank Powell (somebody has to do it!). Frank has had a gay bar in every inhabited geographical location except the Bermuda Triangle (There was some talk about making Frank the ambassador to the Bermuda Triangle). Also, Frank must be nominated for his beautiful "Unrequited Love March." Lyra plays it well.

I would like to nominate Mickey B. Day for his performance in the new horror/space film, "Invasion of the Sweet Eaters!" (And it's headed this way!) And our heartiest congratulations to Mickey for finally succeeding in talking Delta into flying her bulk rate. (She will kill me!)

I would like to nominate Cruise Publisher Robert Swinden for his record (on the Stuck Record Label) as sung by Poor Mouth and the Wasn't-it-Sad-when-They-Died-at-the-End Singers. Love ya' Bob!

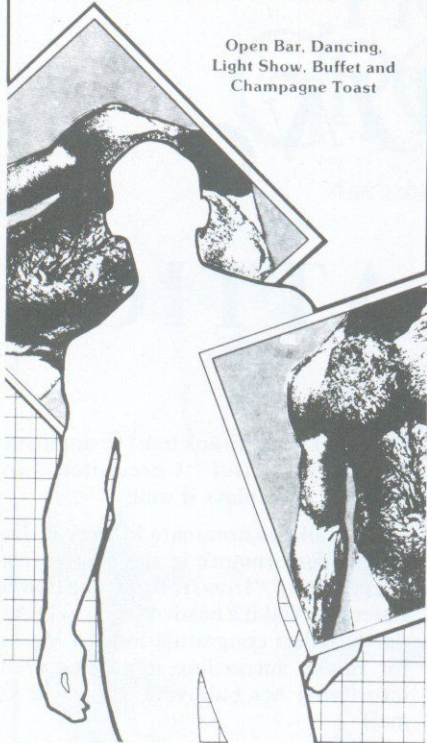

I would like to nominate Tennessee Williams for taking the ole dirt nap in such a tragically fitting way that it defies the uses of fiction. I am reminded of something Blanche says in "Street Car Named Desire." "... I will die of an unwashed grape."

I would like to nominate Chuck Caine for his epicurian delight, Squirrel Brains on Toast Point.

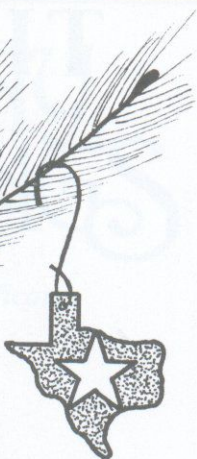

Finally, I would like to nominate Diamond Lil for the best moustache on a female impersonator (Better shave it, love. It only tells everybody how long it's been since your last show). (She'll really kill me for that!)

ATLANTA GAY MEN'S CHORUS DELIGHTS CROWDS

On Saturday, December 10th, the Atlanta Gay Men's Chorus presented their annual Christmas concert, "Fanfare for Christmas," at St. Luke's Episcopal Church and, once again, proved they are one of the country's top men's choruses. Under the skillful baton of Jeff McIntyre the Chorus presented a beautiful combination of contemporary and traditional songs of the holiday season.

One of the key soloists in the first part of the program was James Bennett singing "Gesu Bambino." His smooth Irish lilt gave a lift to the appreciative capacity crowd's evening and led right into one of the highlights of the program. Peaches, a 17 member choral group, culled from among the best of the Chorus and directed by the extremely versatile Michael O'Hearn, presented a wide variety of traditional selections that ranged from Musical Director Jeff McIntyre's rendition of "Coventry Carol" to a crowd favorite, "O Little Town of Sandy Springs."

In the second part of the performance the versatility of these talented young men continued to be evidenced with the full chorus joining soloist Randy Sink and the flute accompaniment of Michael O'Hearn in presenting the beautiful "Still, Still, Still." Mr. Sink's crystal clear vocals, backed by Mr. O'Hearn's masterful flute accompaniment was a special treat.

The remainder of the program along with these highlights was more than was expected and made for a great way to begin the holidays in the true spirit of the season. My hat's off to Jeff McIntyre,

CHRISTINE

Review by Steve Warren

Christine was born in 1957. That makes her about 100 in human years. You don't see a lot of cars her age on the street anymore.

When Christine was young the cars were full of love songs sung by young men to their 409's, Cobras and Little Deuce Coupes. Romantic that she is, Christine never forgot this period of "auto-eroticism."

In 1978 Christine, a red 1958 Plymouth Fury, meets Arnie (Keith Gordon), the school nerd, and it's love at first sight. But she's a demanding mistress who makes Arnie over and then refuses to share him. "You care more about that car than you do about me," correctly complains his nominal girlfriend Leigh (Alexandra Paul); and Arnie's best friend

Dennis (John Stockwell) hardly knows him anymore.

Then there are the school bullies who make the mistake of messing with Christine and learn that hell has nothing like a Fury scorned.

"Christine" is: a) the best movie since "Carrie" to be based on a Stephen King novel; and b) the best movie John Carpenter has made yet.

After a lengthy establishing section—in many ways the film's best part, though basically just high school hijinks—we get down to the two main orders of business: getting revenge on the bad guys (Christine's 'job) and saving Arnie's soul (Dennis and Leigh's job).

Having a strong personality distinguishes Christine from similarly malevolent vehicles in "Duel," "The Car" and "The Cars that Ate People." She speaks through her radio, which only plays songs from the 50's. She halfway turns Arnie into a 50's greaser (a complete conversion would have made this aspect more fun).

Toward the end it becomes difficult to know who to root for. Arnie has become thoroughly unpleasant, but we can't quite hate Christine, even though she's responsible. Leigh and Dennis avenge their shortcomings but they mean well (and they're attractive); still, if it's them or Christine...

I was more into Chevs in 1958, especially my friend Johnny's Impala; but there was a Plymouth or two that gave me a hard-on back then. I could have been true to Christine.

"BRIGHTON BEACH MEMOIRS" COMING TO THE FOX

"Brighton Beach Memoirs," the 21st comedy from the typewriter of America's playwright-laureate, Neil Simon, will begin an engagement of one week at the Fox Theatre, beginning January 31st, 1984.

Tony Award winner Gene Saks has directed the comedy hit, which won two of the theatre's most prestigious awards, The New York Critics Circle and the Outer Circle Theatre Awards. Starring in this outstanding cast (in alphabetical order) are Barbara Caruso, Charles Cioffi, Joan Copeland, Olivia Laurel Mates, Mark Nelson, Elizabeth Perkins and Jonathan Silverman.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" is about many things, bust mostly about the joy and pain of growing up smart, sensitive and aware. Simon's protagonist is 15 year-old Eugene Morris Jerome, a would-be writer who keeps a household journal of the activities of the eccentric household. Of course, Eugene would rather be a baseball player with the New York Yankees, but will be satisfied, if the baseball job fails, to be a writer. The Jerome family consists of his mother and father, his 18 year-old brother, his mother's widowed sister and her two daughters; all living in cramped quarters in a beach area of Brooklyn, New York.

Concentrating on two consecutive early Wednesday evenings, Simon has constructed the play as a series of vignettes, all interlocked with the overall theme of survival during the depression. The various problems deal with thwarted ambition, late-blooming independence, physical illness and personal dishonor—small, everyday problems that ultimately change these people's lives.

One critic said: "It is the true watershed play of Simon's career. By rummaging through memories of his youth and combining them with new found theatrical restraint and superb playwriting craftsmanship, Neil Simon has created an instant American classic."

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" has played with enormous success in Los Angeles and San Francisco, and is still playing to capacity and delighted audiences in New York at the recently re-named Neil Simon Theatre.

The full-stage, two-story setting is by David Mitchell. Patricia Zipprodt designed the costumes and Tharon Musser designed the lighting.

"Brighton Beach Memoirs" will be presented at the Fox Theatre under the auspices of Emanuel Azanberg, Wayne Rogers and Radio City Music Hall Productions in association with Centre Theatre Group/Ahmanson.

7:30pm, and Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2pm.
