THE LISTING ATTIC

by DON TUCKER

I was watching one of those Bible thumpers that are given to yellow suits and white carnations the other night—he was heavy into hell and the end of the world and that whole crowd—and it got me to thinking. Nobody has ever written a word, as far as I know, about Second Coming Etiquette. I mean, who introduces the Pope to the Heavenly Host—or Hostess for that matter?

Do male angels enter before nuns? Are we literally supposed to quake at the sight? What language will be spoken? Latin or Aramaic? Christ spoke Aramaic and I don't know a single word. I can say, "always faithful" and "writing without purpose is vain" in Latin. Oh yes, I do know the Requiem Mass, but supposedly everyone will be alive again. Oh, drat!!

I'm terrible with names but I think I will be able to do alright on account of growing up in the Bible Belt. "Matthew," "Mark," "Luke," "John" and "Max" I've got (Does anybody know Christ's brothers' and sisters' names? How awful!), and I'm pretty sure I'll recognize Moses. Charlton Heston couldn't be all that wrong. And Pontius Pilate should be fairly easy. I love uniforms.

The Saints have me terribly worried. I simply can't remember martyrdoms. If only Saint Joan had known about the Schick Smoke Alarm! Alas!!

Are we talking union scales with the Heavenly Chorus; and I hope it won't be seafood when they feed the multitudes. I'm allergic.

It's just the time to make a social blunder and somebody has to decide . . . so I think we would be fairly safe to say that god will enter first. Now, they're bound to make a big fuss. You know. Lot's of harpists, lots of Aida trumpets, lots of fuges and counterpoint (Bach will probably conducting from the harpsichord). I imagine there will elephants (I always trust my instincts), and, of course, Christ will introduce his father. "Everybody! This is my ole man, King of Kings, Lord of Lords, and Maker of all things both great and not so great . . ."

God will most likely do something dazzling like turning the Hudson River into a really good Bordeaux, and he will introduce the Virgin Mary. Which reminds me—wear anything but white. It would be tacky and probably make her furious (Mae West wouldn't allow another blond on stage—fair is fair).

And I would wear comfortable shoes if I were you. There will probably be a lot of speeches and standing around, and I imagine with all that light and energy around that it's going to be a little on the warm side. Wear something loose and breezy but accessorize.

Always allow members of the heavenly party to speak first. I know a lot of queens will be excited, but try not to be pushy or too familiar. After all, you don't really know them.

I don't know the weight limit on what you will be allowed to take with you so I would suggest that you put on all of your gold and leave everything else. Unless, of course, you own a particularly fine icon or important religious relic (James Dean's eyebrow pencil doesn't count).

Be sure and smile a lot. I understand that they're happy all of the time. Don't bum change or drinks off of members of the Heavenly Party. The Bible doesn't say anything about them having pockets. I'm pretty sure we'll be expected to pay for the Second Coming even though it's their party.

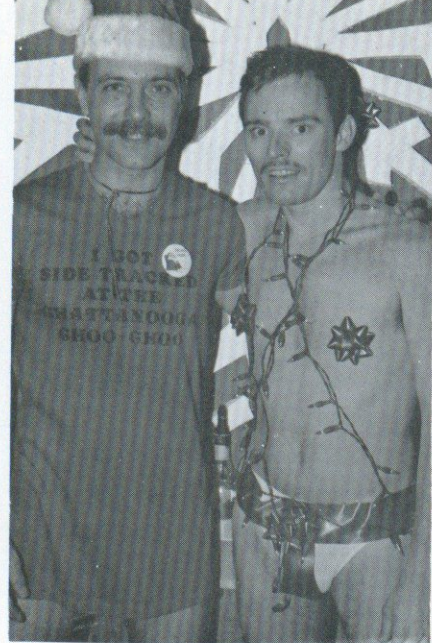

Oh, don't ask God how old he is. I understand he doesn't look anywhere near it. Otherwise, just be yourself and take your chances.

Dear Diamond Lil,

Dear Readers,

Here, at Christmas time, I want to express my appreciation for all of your support, your interest, and your letters that have encouraged and enabled us to keep this column going throughout the entire year of 1983. It is through this mutual sharing that we are able to gain a new perspective and dimension into the problems that may confront us and others, and thus allow ourselves to find new, better ways in which we can live a brighter, richer, fuller life.

As 1983 comes to a close, I would like to wish each and everyone of you the most joyful holiday season, the merriest Christmas, and the happiest New Year!

*I love you all,
Diamond Lil*

Dear Lil,

I have been seeing a really nice guy for a while now, and last night he informed me that he has changed his mind about me. This puts me at my wits' end, because it's a carbon copy of the sort of thing which has been happening to me for some time now. He, like all the others, has suddenly decided that a relationship just "isn't what he wants right now." I'm beginning to feel as if I'm the single most deadly threat to relationships in this city. What makes it worse is that none of the relationships have been my idea (initially, at least). Each guy was one who initiated a conversation with me, liked me because I was "different" (and I still haven't figured out what that means), and really felt like the two of us would be right together. Then, on an average of six weeks to two months later, they come to the same conclusion that the guy mentioned above came to.

If it had only happened a couple of times or even three or four, then I wouldn't be this upset, but I've been out for years, and this is the way it's always been. The one guy who wanted to stick around turned out to have major emotional and mental problems. Now that he's on the road to recovery, he barely acknowledges my existence.

Not to sound conceited, but I know it's not my looks, and I seem to have a fairly likeable personality (I never have trouble making friends). I don't think it could be my age, because I'm only 23 (although I'm beginning to feel a lot older). Also, I can say with honesty that I'm not a demanding or possessive person; the only things I ask out of a relationship are a little affection and a respectable amount of honesty.

My friends tell me not to worry, that I'm bound to meet someone nice eventually, but, as a somewhat more realistic acquaintance of mine remarked, I seem to attract jerks like black corduroy pants attract lint.

So. Any suggestions you could make would be greatly appreciated, because, as you can see, I've pretty much run dry. Thanks for the sympathetic ear.

M.S.P. in Marietta

Dear M.S.P.

Thank you very much for your poignant message. You may not be aware of it, and I don't think I'm wrong; but I have a feeling that, by your letter, this is probably the most honest you have been with yourself in a very long time. The key to solving our problems begins with being aware of what they are, and I feel you have taken the first step forward by putting them on paper. Now, M.S.P., you can take a closer look at what we have and initiate the changes we may desire.

Patterns and routines that we no longer want are very difficult to change, and this is certainly what we have here. Although you say you're not satisfied with the lovers you attract. This is because your routines are the same—just like a divorcee who marries the same kind of person time after time and wonders, "Why, oh why do all my marriages fail?" We do have a tendency to choose the same kinds of people, you know; but we CAN begin choosing NEW friends. Don't feel down on yourself for being involved with what your friend terms "jerks." You needed them at the time, and they needed you. It's part of a growing process—like we needed "mommy" when we were five to help us cross the street.

Let's take a look at your guy with the emotional problems who stuck around for awhile. You state that since he is on the road to recovery, he doesn't acknowledge your existence. When people experience NEW GROWTH, they want others to grow along with them—not remain at a standstill. Could this be pointing out something to you? The lad needed you when he was on your level; he's outgrown you now. Are YOU content with where you are?

Each of your boyfriends liking you "because you're different" is merely a figure of speech and should not be taken literally. "Being different," as used conversationally, really means "you're the one with whom I'm able to share my time." True, each and everyone of us is a unique person in his own right; but we all have the same common denominator of being human with the same wants and needs.

You say you are wanting affection and honesty from a relationship. Are YOU able to give these things? Remember, it takes two. You mention that none of your relationships have been your idea and that it's the other party that terminates them. May I suggest for NEW GROWTH that YOU initiate your next relationship—this time something YOU want. YOU go after what YOU want!

In the meantime, Sweetheart, if I find you're remaining in the same stew and bog. I'm going to come out to Marietta, Georgia, and spank you good and proper.

With love, new growth and some new joy,

Diamond Lil

HOTLANTA RAFT RACE WEEKEND '84 ANNOUNCED

The 1984 National Hotlanta Raft Race will expand this year to a format of six days. The popular annual event will feature contests, a laser show, parties and of course, the traditional rafting trip down the Chattahoochee River. Festivities will begin Tuesday, July 31st, and continue through Sunday, August 5th. The theme for this year's enlarged and more exciting Hotlanta Raft Race will be

"Eclipse" and the celebration promises to be "An Event in Time!"

Watch for further details. For information phone 404 876-7946 or write: National Hotlanta Raft Race Week, PO Box 7606 Atlanta, Ga 30357.

SUDDEN IMPACT

Review by Steve Warren

"Sudden Impact" begins with Bruce Surtee's lovely night photography of San Francisco accompanied by Lalo Schiffrin's theme riddled with synthesized gunfire.

The sound effects are soon replaced by the real thing—"a 38 caliber vasectomy" in a car parked at Land's End. It's only Sondra Locke starting her vengeance on the men (and one woman—Audrie J. Neenan) who raped her and her littler sister ten years before.

It's almost an hour before Locke meets Inspector Harry Callahan (Clint Eastwood), who by then has killed about ten people in the line of duty. After that the questions are: Who can pile up more bodies? Will their ideas of moral justification finally coincide? and Can you get a man with a gun (with apologies to Irving Berlin)?

Most of the action takes place in San Paulo (played by Santa Cruz), a fictional coastal town North or South, depending on which dialogue you believe.

Someday Clint Eastwood will be recognized as a damned good director of this kind of movie. "Sudden Impact," or "Dirty Harry IV," is his bid to regain the box office momentum he lost with last year's underrated "Honky Tonk Man." Harry doesn't work with orangutans, so he's got a bulldog named Meathead for commercial insurance.

If you can laugh at this kind of cartoon violence—and the brutality against women is intense; but so is their revenge including the heavy-handed symbolism of the coup de grace—let Dirty Harry go ahead and make your day.

GAY PEOPLE URGED TO "TALK BACK TO THE MEDIA"

The Media Fund for Human Rights has announced a major, nationwide campaign to make gay people more critical of the media. The campaign was launched with an exhibit during the November convention of the National Association of Business Councils in Los Angeles. Convention-goers were invited to view a video tape of the medial coverage of many gay issues and to respond to a questionnaire. The tape is available for viewing by gay groups around the country.

The Media Fund for Human Rights is a tax-exempt charitable and educational organization, founded by the Gay Press Association, the international association of gay media professional.

"Local groups have been doing incredibly successful consciousness-raising among media officials in their communities," according to Mike Rutherford, Executive Director of the Media Fund. "Now, the time has come for us to be sending our version of breaking news stories directly into the electronic news systems of the country—and do it on a national level." It's a task, he says, which will take full-time professionals lots of money, and cooperation among gay groups nationwide.

"If we could just match the technical facilities of the Moral Majority, we could begin to counter some of the 'media fag-bashing' which is going on," said Morgan Pinney, CPA, who is Chief Executive Officer for the project.

The heart of the operation of the Media Fund is the computerized electronic network, established more than a year ago by the Gay Press Association and now operated by the Media Fund. The system is now accessible by any group in the country, using any of the popular home computers connected over regular telephone lines to the "host" computer in New York. Any group can leave messages for any other groups or disseminate press releases to all groups. Members of special sub-groups, such as gay lawyers or gay journalists, will communicate within their special sections of the system. "All of this will result in a better and more rapidly informed gay community, and everyone will be in touch with the Media Fund as we send news and analysis directly into the electronic news systems of the country," according to Pinney.

groups—the Rolling Stones, Genesis, and Yes—from its shelves in 148 stores across the country, Tuesday, December 13th.

The action by the nation's second-largest record retailer followed Atlantic Records announcement the preceding Monday, that it was raising the list price on the three LPs from $8.98 to $9.98, a 13 percent wholesale and retail increase.

Ralph King, Record Bar's Senior Vice President of marketing, said the increase appears to be "an attempt to increase profits at a time—less than two weeks before Christmas—when consumers are least price-resistant."

In response, Record Bar pulled the three albums from its shelves. A poster, which will arrive in all stores shortly, explains that Record Bar is refusing to pass along the increase and will sell the albums at the $8.98 list price "as long as current stock exists," said King. The poster, which will be displayed with the albums, encourages consumers to join Record Bar's protest by refusing to buy these records. According to store managers, initial response indicates that consumers are joining the protest. Manager Barbara Quarles in Charlotte, N.C., said "even big fans of the groups, once told what Atlantic has done, are deciding not to buy the albums."

In a telegram Tuesday, Record Bar protested increases to executives at Atlantic's headquarters in New York and at its parent corporation, WEA, in Burbank, CA. The telegram calls the action "inflammatory and in complete disregard for the record-buying public."

Past experience has show, said King, that other manufacturers will follow WEA's example. Coming at a time when the record industry has experienced some six months of sales gains, the increases are an attempt to exploit the marketplace, said King.

"As a retailer we feel we have to make the albums available, but we will make consumers aware of our distaste for WEA's action. They've shown an un-

BACKSTREET SHOWS BENEFIT TAPE

Thursday, December 29th at 9pm Backstreet will host the showing of the Atlanta Gay Center's Benefit at Illusions featuring Angela Bowie.

THE DEATH OF THE DOWAGER EMPRESS

On January 11th, 1983, Ted Binkley and Illusions will sponsor an unusual evening of entertainment. As a joint retirement special and benefit for the establishment of a SAGE (Seniors in a Gay Environment) chapter here in Atlanta, the show boasts a cast including almost every major name in the entertainment circles plus an unusual theme and contest.

The detective for the evening will be Laverne Edwards, Supersleuth, who will investigate the facts, the suspects, the motives and the possible causes of death throughout the show and will reveal the truth at the end of the night. The audience is invited to participate by putting their ticket stub in the box marked with the name of the person they think committed the crime. At the end of the show, following the announcement of the killer, there will be a drawing from those tickets in the correct box. The prize is a lavish night on the town including dinner and entertainment.

The suspects for the evening include: John Austin; Ted Binkley; Satyn Deville; Jay Diamond; Layton Gregory; Billy Jones; "Butch" Kidd; "Sunny" Moon; Damian Romagnani; Frank Scheuren; Keith B. Street; and Dennis Wirzman.
