Setting the story straight

Former
porn queen
Traci Lords
still searching for legitimacy

spw1

by daniel a. kusner

dressed in an expensive silky pink shirt, Traci Lords welcomes me into the enormous penthouse suite at Dallas' Hotel Adolphus. Later that night, she appears on Dateline, and the following night Larry King gushes over her for an entire hour. But in her mind, she's still waiting for her big break.

"Would you please tell everybody that I'm ready to become a mainstream overnight sensation?" she says, only half-joking.

Back in the mid-'80s, Lords (born Nora Kuzma), was the pouty-lipped high school dropout with a fake ID who reigned as the Queen of Porn. At age 15, she was the September 1984 Pet of the Month centerfold for Penthouse's best selling issue, the one with recently dethroned Vanessa Williams on the cover. Soon after that infamous spread, Lords became one of the biggest names in XXX video. After turning 18 and cranking out 20 or so now-illegal titles (with names like Beverly Hills Copulator), the FBI raided her Hollywood apartment during a years-long sting operation to crack down on underage performers.

In more ways than one, director John Waters gave her a new life. With a knack for stunt casting (Paty Hearst, Sonny Bono, Debbie Harry), he made a divine choice enlisting Lords in the '50s white-trash musical Cry Baby, where Lords met her first husband.

"John Waters means the world to me. Obviously, on a professional level, he started the beginning of my new career," she says. "And it really wasn't until I met him that I realized how much success nervous about going to certain parts of town because there were so many good ol' boys who liked to beat up sweet meat — that's what they called the gay men there. And just the danger, the jeopardy that he was put in, sometimes just going to the fucking supermarket — it just opened my eyes. It also made me feel a kinship that I hadn't felt anywhere else. I knew that when he looked at me, it wasn't judgment. It was like a common bond we shared because he had his own persecutions because of his sexuality."

With numerous credits appearing on countless TV shows like Married with Children, Melrose Place and Roseanne, Lords is also a fabulous techno-music diva and high-profile DJ who was also billed on Lollapalooza tours spinning at after-parties. But her new literary career marks the first time she's telling her fascinating life story.

"I don't want to sit here and cry into my hanky and say, 'Oh, poor me. Feel sorry for me.' I made it very intentional in my book not to do that," she says. "I just wanted to say this is what happened, which wasn't what people necessarily thought. I've read so many things written about me that are just complete bullshit, and it just got to a point where I thought, 'If you want to know it, here it is. Judge it how you need to judge it, but here it is.'"

Boy meets play

Another reality dating series centered on lies, all lies!

by steven lindsey

It's manipulative, morally deviant and highly controversial. It's also sexy, hilarious and surprisingly suspenseful. Basically, Bravo's latest super-gay show, Boy Meets Boy, has something for everyone, both those who want to pick it apart and hate it, and those who simply take it for what it is: a TV show, for God's sake. Sure, it may seem a little mean spirited — forcing a sweet gay man to try to find true love among a group of men, some of whom are only pretending to be queer — but that's the risk people take when they sign up for reality TV. Yet despite its surface shock value, the series somehow manages to do exactly what its seemingly lofty claims said it would do — shatter stereotypes, both gay and straight.

No gay man's going to care about the show's social values, because leading man James will make you forget your own name as soon as he makes his first on-screen appearance — eyes twinkling and pearly whites gleaming as his perfectly chiseled jaw waxes on one exquisitely placed dimple like an old friend looking for a knowing hug. Rippling beneath his lovingly starched shirt is a mound of muscular manhood just waiting to burst from its constraints to bring love and peace to all the children of the world.

The festivities take place over several days at a posh Palm Springs home complete with pool, hot tub and a seemingly always open bar. Fifteen men are paraded out and given the chance to make an unforgettable first impression in case they aren't given the chance to have a one-on-one with James before the first some of the men are straight, as it will become painfully clear after about the gazillionth time host Dani Behr mentions it to the TV audience in the span of the first episode. (Please get a thesaurus, sweetie; I can't handle you calling the guys "mates" for one more second.)

Annoying host aside, the show is truly entertaining and plays out like the game show To Tell the Truth — see, the sexuality of each suitor isn't revealed until they're eliminated, so we get to look for clues throughout the episode. F a i r warning: the elimination ceremony is every bit as cheesy as The Bachelor, Joe Millionaire or any other dating show, though instead of a rose or jewelry as a symbol of approval, James must hand each a glass of hot pink champagne. If reality dating continues with such fervor, we can't be too far from, "By accepting this shrimp cocktail, you are agreeing to stay on the show and pursue eternal happiness." Just you wait.

Not wanting to be a one-gimmick show, however, the producers will indeed reveal to James and Andra midway through the series that some of the suitors are straight. That's when the real quite a challenge for our greedy little straight men, who are competing for a meager $25,000 if chosen by the leading man. Conversely, if James does pick a gay man, he gets the $25,000 and the two men get a fabulous dream vacation to explore each other's um, personalities.

Ultimately, Boy Meets Boy makes for the perfect post-Queer Eye for the Straight Guy companion and propels Bravo to the head of the pack in quality gay-programming, depending on how loosely you define "quality." Five years ago, the idea of a gay dating show would've sent most straight men running for a truck rally or to aitty bar. Now, they're jumping right in with limp wrists a-flapping. We've come a long way, baby.

Boy Meets Boy

Leo (July 23-August 22) It's going to be quite an event-filled week leading up to that new moon in your sign on the 29th. Don't turn away a friend in need because your schedule is tight. Go out this weekend and do some serious spending, Leo. You're overdue for a getaway day. Turn up the charm factor when dealing with new clients.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) Self-promotion and advertising are the key ingredients to climbing the career ladder over the next two months. Don't shy away from the spotlight or you could miss out on a wonderful opportunity. Stay away from any highways on the 29th due to the planet Mars acting strangely — trust us on this.

Libra (September 23-October 22) The call of the wild will just have to wait a while longer — there's simply too much to be done at home and work, Libra. That sweet Piscean would just love to ask you out, but he's confused by the mixed signals you're giving off. The 30th looks best for tackling any of those tasks.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) You tend to be in the right mood of the time, but it's not a good idea to go around bragging about it — that turns people off. Take satisfaction in a job well done (along with that nice paycheck, of course). That current thing is a lovely step along the way, but it won't end up going the distance.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) We know how much you hate to hurry up and wait, so that pattern that plagued you for the past month is, happily, starting to fade. Things will go from famine to feast — where there were no jobs at all, now you'll get to choose from several. Look at each choice carefully, not just the salary offered.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) Lord knows that relationships aren't easy and require constant tending to. People tend to grow and change over time, so cut your sweetie some slack — nothing is as cut and dried as it seems. Charge up those energy batteries, because August is going to be a 31-day career and financial marathon.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) You're not out of the woods yet where that financial mess is concerned, but progress is being made. You have much free time this weekend and a shoestring budget. Use that brain of yours to search out inexpensive ways to have fun. Don't spend Sunday holed up at home.

Pisces (February 19-March 19) Security of all types is important to you, but don't be afraid to step out of that comfort zone occasionally — even if that means getting away on your own. Your sweetie is likely to be a grumpy bear on Monday, so leave him be. Good news from a distance perks you up on the 29th.

Aries (March 20-April 19) Your chart ruler (Mars) goes into a two-month retrograde pattern on the 29th, which will benefit you in subtle ways. For one thing, you won't speak out before thinking quite so much. You're also likely to be more tolerant of others' mistakes. Saturday looks like a heavenly night on the town, so dress to the hilt!

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The last four months haven't been a particularly fun-filled time, though you've grown tremendously. You need to get out and play, Taurus. Too much of that nose to the grindstone ethic ages you quickly. Get in touch with a special old friend this weekend — you'll both have a great deal to tell one another.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) We certainly admire the way you redecorated your place. So when are you going to show it off, Gemmy? How about inviting a few friends over on Saturday night for the unveiling? It doesn't have to be fancy — even a potluck dinner would work. It's a good week to look at new cars but not to purchase one.
