Quick look inside

- 6 CHAT
Sarah Michelle Gellar's longtime squeeze Freddie Prinze Jr. doesn't mind seeing her getting it on for the cameras — with other women, that is!
- 10 FEATURE
If you're a gay professional who's running out of things to do, perhaps it's time to venture out with Adventure Out in Austin, Dallas and Houston.
- 14 BEAT
During her varied career, African beauty Lanya has toured and performed with the very best, but now she's on her own with debut album.
- 16 CYBER
Wonder which Internet search engine is the best. The answer from some rigorous testing by The Associated Press is no surprise — it's Google.
- 18 FILM
If you're talking about its lead actor, then give an "A" to Six Feet Under's Lauren Ambrose. But as for the film Swimming, it just can't stay afloat.
- 22 DADDY'S DAY
Forget the necktie. Here are some great ideas for Father's Day — and a reminder not to forget your special Daddy when June 16 rolls around.
- 24 CLUBLAND
Pix from Austin, Dallas, Houston and San Antonio.
- 32 SPLAT
Eighth in the Sexpack series turns up the heat in the great outdoors.

Prinze loves Gellar's same-sex romps

Buffy the Vampire Slayer star says longtime lover Freddie Prinze Jr. gets turned on watching her with other girls

chat

Freddie Prinze Jr. hates watching girlfriend Sarah Michelle Gellar's love scenes — unless she's getting it on with other girls. Buffy the Vampire Slayer great Gellar, who stars alongside her long-term lover in the Scooby-Doo movie, has had dozens of on-screen clinches, on the small screen in Buffy and in hit flicks like Cruel Intentions.

But Sarah says fiance Freddie is happy to watch her strip on screen, if she's getting steamy with another woman. The sexy star says, "He doesn't watch my love scenes. Although he was very into some Scooby Doo scenes with the bad guy — he watched them over and over again. And oddly enough he liked my girl-on-girl scenes from Cruel Intentions."

And she admits she has no problem watching Freddie get heavy with glamorous co-stars, because she knows how clinical and unromantic onscreen passion really is. Sarah adds, "I know what it's like. It's a job. I know how incredibly unsexy it is. I don't worry."

Pop romeo Enrique Iglesias has admitted to feelings of loneliness despite the attentions of women across the world. The Hero star admits to feeling most

"I often look in the mirror and think there are things about my body that aren't that great. I have got a bit of cellulite, I must admit. It's only faint, but I can see it if I look carefully."

— Kylie Minogue, renowned the world over for her shapely buttocks

"The lawsuit is a rebuttal that everything in the article is false. Literally millions of people read that garbage. People believe what they read and they sell a lot of copies."

— Aretha Franklin's attorney Barry B. Langberg about the singer's suit against the Star, claiming it published an inaccurate story that she had an alcohol problem

"I would love to get back into television. But there's nothing there right now. I think I'm at the end of my gay rope. I've done enough of that. I've played the gay guy next door who tells the girl what blouse to wear and makes muffins for everyone. I'd rather never act again if that's all I ever got. I want to play real people, not several agendas."

— Scott ("Kids in the Hall") Thompson, to Dallas Voice

alone after a performance, when hangers-on vie for his attention. He says, "There is always time for love. Any artist who says they can't find time for romance is talking nonsense."

"But there are times when I feel lonely, particularly when I find myself alone in a hotel room after a concert. But it is far worse when you are surrounded by people who do not know you, or do not even like you, who you know are only there because you are famous."

He continues, "It doesn't do you any good if they just pander to you all the time. You need real friends who will be honest with you."

Transvestite performer Dame Edna Everage, a fave with gay audiences around the world, is trying to get her former Ally McBeal co-star Calista Flockhart to put on some weight. The flamboyant Australian, whose real name is Barry Humphries, agrees with media concerns that the pretty actress is too slim.

When asked if she got on well with the skinny star, Dame Edna says, "Oh yes, very well. I'm trying to encourage her to eat a little bit more, too."

And Dame Edna said she was pleased to be the only plump actress in the now-defunct show, which has a cast of slim beauties, including Portia di Rossi and Lucy Liu.

Dame Edna says she brought "glamour and credibility" to the legal comedy, adding "The girls here are very thin. I give the show a bit more volume. The secret's my Australian diet. Steak for break-fast, lunch and dinner."

Gay REM frontman Michael Stipe has developed a fascination with a cross-dressing, drug-taking author. The singer has been spotted attending colorful writer J.T. Leroy's readings in New York — even though he's been trying to keep a low profile. Stipe recently attended a reading wearing a big brown hat with a pale brown hankerchief on his head in an attempt to disguise his star identity.

Cross-dressing actor and basketball great Dennis Rodman — who used to be spotted hanging around the Village Station in Dallas — has reached an undisclosed settlement with a man who alleged the former basketball player rubbed dice on his body.

Las Vegas casino worker James Brasich claims the B.A.P.S. star humiliated him during an October 1997 dice game at Sin City's Mirage hotel casino, when Rodman placed a dice on Brasich's head, chest, stomach and genitals.

The multi-pierced Rodman came to the settlement after appealing a $80,000 jury award to the Nevada Supreme Court, which made a decision last November without hearing Rodman's case, who was absent in court. The ex-husband of Carmen Electra didn't deny that he rubbed Brasich with the dice, but claimed it was a good luck gesture and the dealer failed to tell him to stop.

Will & Grace star Debra Messing was forced to stand up for her celebrity status in front of an audience of uncaring French journalists. The flame-haired star appeared in Woody Allen's latest movie, Hollywood Ending, and joined the legendary actor to promote the film at the Cannes film festival last month.

But she had a rude awakening — while Allen is a hero in France, 34-year-old Debra is completely unknown, and was ignored by the assembled press. After thirty minutes Messing was finally asked, "Do you like France?" She replied, "I'm very excited to be here, but I just want to say that I'm very famous in the States for a TV show named Will & Grace."

Charlie's Angels producer Leonard Goldberg is looking forward to starting the sequel — but admits the production is strapped for cash due to the stars' huge salaries.

Hollywood babes Cameron Diaz, Drew Barrymore and Lucy Liu are all reprising their roles of Natalie, Dylan and Alex for the follow-up to the 2000 smash blockbuster, a fave with gay audiences for its self-conscious wit and camp sensibility.

Filming for the sequel begins in August. Goldberg explains, "We may start in Vegas for a few weeks. Our story writing is nearing the end and we haven't confirmed Vegas yet. It's expensive to go there.

"We have the three girls back.

We haven't yet decided about Bill Murray (Angels' supervisor Bosley)." Murray isn't expected to return after reports of an on-set bust up with Ally McBeal co-star Liu.

Goldberg continues, "In a sequel, the cast gets more money so costs are higher.

"Charlie's Angels 1 hadn't adequate prep time. There was no locked-in script. Can't set locations until you have the script, so you have to scramble to get them. That means paying more for them because there's no alternative.

You have to build sets week-ends with three crews on 'golden-time.' It looks just the same as if you'd done it less expensively, but it costs twice as much."

And the cast are hopeful the original Angels — Farrah Fawcett, Jaclyn Smith and Kate Jackson from the '70s TV show — will make cameos in the sequel. Goldberg says, "As you know, we tried for the first one but Farrah refused. We'll possibly make a stab at it again. Possibly."

An adventure for gay professionals

Adventure Out plans functions for gay singles and couples, from cultural events to outdoors activities

feature

by todd epperson

Stuck in a rut? Need to add a little spice to your social life? Perhaps it's time to Adventure Out.

The new Austin-based Web site is in the business of getting professional gays and lesbians out of the house and into a fun social activity. Just log onto www.aotexas.com and click your way to meeting new friends and good times. Currently serving Austin and Dallas, plans are also underway to include Houston soon.

Founder Bill Skov launched the company in April after a successful career in computer technology. As a project manager for various Internet sites, he was familiar with the online community and its still vast, uncharted frontier.

So he decided to do a little exploring.

After noticing an advertisement for a "straight" singles meeting service, it sparked the idea to do something similar for the gay and lesbian community. Although he thinks gay bars are fun and certainly have their place, he's always looked for alternatives to meeting people.

"I wanted people to be able to come together and participate in activities in a friendly, structured environment," Skov says. "We offer a diverse range of activities to attract different types of people.

"And people can also make suggestions on the Web site."

A recent surf through the site featured a Dallas wave of activities that included dinner at Uncle Julio's, coffee at the Crossroads Bookstore and Café, church at Cathedral of Hope and frolicking through Razzle Dazzle Dallas' street party. Jeremy May is the Dallas coordinator.

In Austin, members recently had their choice of a wilderness preserve hike, country dance lessons or an evening at the theater. If there's a large enough group, discounts to events that cost money may be obtained, as well. Skov is the resident coordinator in Austin.

If all goes well, future plans include gay-friendly vacation excursions to such cities as Atlanta, Boston/Provincetown or Puerto Vallarta.

"Our goal is to be an extremely active organization," Skov says.

Different strokes for different folks — a nice mix of adventurous sport outings, cultural events and a little partying thrown in for good measure. Many of the activities are organized to accommodate beginners, as well.

Of course this is a business, so there is a fee to be a member of the Adventure Out social club. For $24.95 a month, members have full access to the Web site and its services. For example, there's an event page which lists upcoming events and a sign-up sheet. Members can also check out to see who else will be attending the soirée.

Singles as well as couples are welcome to join up. Skov says that he doesn't want people to think of the Web site as an Internet dating service. Rather, it's an opportunity to meet and socialize with interesting people.

For those who feel a bit shy in social situations, he added that there's always an ice-breaker at the beginning of each event.

"We always ask people to say a little something about their background to get people talking," Skov says. "We also keep a look-out for shy people and introduce them to others in the group."

Although the main point is to make new friends and have a good time, there are no rules against dating and finding Mr. or Ms. Right. There are online profiles to check out and the ability to communicate with other members without giving out personal e-mail addresses or telephone numbers.

Members also have the opportunity to post an online classified ad to sell a car, get a job, find a roommate or adopt a pet. There's also helpful links to gay information, entertainment and recreational sites. There are no additional charges for these services.

Currently, most of the members are singles in the 28 to 40-ish age range and predominately male. However, there are younger and older members and those demographics could easily skew as the brand new company matures and attracts more members.

Finding fun and entertaining things to do has long been a frustration for singles of any gender or sexual orientation. It's nice to know that Skov has adventured out and done something about it.

Todd Epperson is a Dallas-based writer who contributes frequently to Qtexas.

If men au natural is your favorite dish, then Texas stages are dishing up heaping helpings that should satisfy the manliest of appetites.

This weekend in the capital city, Naughty Austin Theater Company opens the ubiquitous Making Porn, Ronnie Larsen's humorous but telling inside look at the gay porn industry. Here's your chance to see two porn superstars onstage at once as blockbuster performers Ryan Idol and Chris Steele co-star.

Sort of a Boogie Nights onstage — without any of the histrionic volence of drugs and self-delusion that befall the movie's characters — Making Porn, set in the early '80s, takes a fairly cheery, upbeat approach with likeable characters such as Ricky, a 19-year-old college freshman who's gaga over making his first porn movie, and Ray, a sarcastic wit who excuses himself from a group conversation by announcing, "I'll go lube up my asshole." Then there's the straight Jack, with dreams of becoming a legitimate actor, who's married to Linda, the suburban wife who becomes a porn enthusiast once she realizes the industry's profit potential.

Naked guys onstage

Despite some structural problems — the play's second act is a scant 20 minutes or so during which the characters' lives begin to unravel and, finally, the specter of AIDS rears its head — Making Porn has received rave reviews from coast to coast.

Warning: tickets for this one are going fast, so if you want to go, get reserervations right away.

Houstonians get their chance to enjoy pleasures of the flesh at Bienvenue Theatre's production of Naked Boys Singing, which opened last weekend. The hilarious and outrageous musical revue features, as the bill states, nine totally talented, totally musical, totally gorgeous, totally naked guys.

• Making Porn, by Ronnie Larsen. Naughty Austin Theater Company. June 13 through July 13. Wednesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. Tickets $20-$30. www.naughtyaustin.com or 512-407-8877.

• Naked Boys Singing, by Robert Schrock. Bienvenue Theatre, 372 Washington Ave., Houston. Through July 27. Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. with special Pride Weekend schedule with additional performances June 29 and June 30 at 2 p.m.

It's only a matter of time before real talent will be out, and Lamya is brimming with it. Born in Kenya of Omani descent and raised in Sheffield, England, Lamya (pronounced Lamb-ya) writes, arranges, performs, and produces all of her own material. A classically trained opera singer whose gorgeous vocals are best known from her work on Soul II Soul's Vol. II: A New Decade and Vol. V: Believe, she has appeared on records by some of the biggest acts of the last quarter century, among them David Bowie and James Brown as well as recent work by Duran Duran, Anjelique Kidjo and Cheb Mami.

Now it is her turn. Her debut stands alone in the pop music landscape, with Lamya's otherworldly vocals supported by laid-back hip-hop and dance beats, luscious string arrangements, guitars, sitars and a panoply of Eastern percussion. Flexing a swooping five-octave range, Lamya whispers, soars and swirls around her strikingly literary tales of love, defiance and the uphill search for identity.

The songs on her debut album, Learning from Falling, were culled from poems she's written all her life, some as early as age 11. Lamya's soundscapes are unique three-dimensional worlds that invite comparisons to Bjork and Kate Bush. But Lamya is all her own, managing to balance eccentricity with an inviting melodic accessibility.

She caught a break as featured vocalist with Soul II Soul. She toured the world and became at home on the road, a process solidified by two years on tour with Duran Duran. All the while Lamya crafted her own music, much of which went through rock permutations very different from their present incarnations.

Lamya is exquisite on record and simply breathtaking live. She is a songstress whose instrument needs no processing, whose skill is more powerful the more it is stripped down. She is a woman of paradox — despite her classical training, she prefers to sing pop. She's more comfortable on stage before 20,000 strangers than in a room with 2. An intensely private person, her lyrics tell her most personal life stories.

The songs on Learning from Falling are as exotic as they are full of pop hooks, as dark as they are sunny and as healing as they are hurting. What else could be expected from a multi-lingual trombone-playing singer?

"From living in so many places, I have found that you can convey what you mean without even knowing the language," Lamya says. "If you really understand what you are trying to say, you can communicate on several levels at once. Some things are universal. If I sing the last verse of a song in Swahili, I think people can still understand what I'm saying because they hear the feeling in it."

Lamya is also possessed of an exotic beauty that's captured the attention of image maker extraordinaire Jean-Baptiste Mondino, whose most recent work includes the photos and videos for Madonna's Music as well as legendary artwork for Bjork and Prince. After hearing "Empires," Lamya became Mondino's next nascent icon. As only he could say, "She is haute-couture."

Learning From Falling is coming out July 25th, and Lamya's co-producers include Soul II Soul/Massive Attack/Bjork legend Nellee Hooper, Mark Ronson and Justin Stanley (who produced Nikka Costa's debut) and David Kahne, who immortalized Southern California reggae-rockers Sublime.

Open your ears and Lamya will open your eyes. She's been waiting a lifetime.

And that's the beats.

Google wins on the Web

In rigorous tests by AP, search engine bests the competition

cyber

by gary n. reese

Gary N. Reese is a systems administrator in the Houston area. He may be reached via e-mail at garyreesenet@netscape.net

Need the fastest and smartest guide for the Internet? You don't need to look far. According to a test of some leading search engines on the Web, the clear winner is Google.

Accuracy, speed and thoroughness of the Web's most popular sleuths were tested by The Associated Press in April. The search engines were asked to duel over seven diverse questions that members of the news agency posed. Results were graded on processing speed and relevancy of the links search engines displayed.

Questions used were ones that had recently come up in AP stories or in an investigative reporting class that Michael Bass, the director of The Associated Press' News and Information Research Center, teaches at New York University.

Most important, Google was the only search engine to provide requested information on its first page of results. (That's why I favor it, too. It wears me out to click through five or more pages of links to find the one I need.)

Two questions the reporters asked stumped the panel of electronic investigators. One was, "What Pulitzer Prizes did the New Orleans Times-Picayune win and in what year?"

Google needed just 0.24 seconds to display a link to a page on the Times-Picayune's Web site, which noted that the New Orleans papers had won two Pulitzers in 1997 — one for public service and another for editorial cartooning.

The second question — "What is the name of the song featured in the Mitsubishi commercials with the lyrics, 'I wish that I knew what I know now, when I was younger?'" — was answered by Google a click's-blink faster. In 0.19 seconds Google cinched the answer ("Ooh La La," composed in 1973 by Ron Wood and Ronnie Lane and recorded by Rod Stewart) even though the tester had misspelled Mitsubishi in the search term.

How did the competition do? Veteran AltaVista and upstart Teoma gave high relevancy rankings to a Web site of MSN Money. All that site reported was that its managing editor used to work at the New Orleans paper and several staffers had won Pulitzer Prizes. Alltheweb recommended a site with a schedule for a library festival in New Orleans where two former Pulitzer Prize winners were to speak.

What gives Google the edge? The Mountain View-based company says it draws upon an index of 3 billion documents, clearly the largest database of those tested, the AP concluded.

I might add that another quick-draw that wasn't tested in this duel is Copernic 2001, software with a built-in browser that allows you to refine searches and save them on your hard drive. Download the freeware version at www.copernic.com.

Calling all hackers

Kristi Langstoyl is looking for a good computer hacker. So badly that she is offering a reward.

The librarian of the Ivar Asen Centre for New Norwegian Culture has a problem most of us wish would go away. Her library has a database that it can't unlock because the man who compiled it died nine years ago without writing down his password.

The database contains more than 14,000 books and magazines written in New Norwegian. Langstoyl can read the entries on dBase disks of what is in the database, but without the password she can't get access to them. If a hacker can't crack the password, she will have to recatalog the collection and rebuild the database herself.

The library has just issued a cyber distress call by listing a link on its Web site to the files it needs to get into. Langstoyl will reward the first successful hacker with a free trip to the New Norwegian festival in Oresta, Norway.

Free, that is, if you're a hacker already living in Norway! No deep pockets at the Centre for New Norwegian Culture, unlike the Nobel Committee in neighboring Sweden.

"It is more difficult than we thought," explains Langstoyl. "We have had about 80 e-mails and phone calls from all over Norway, mostly from people who work in small businesses, some private persons, that are interested in computing and want to try to solve our problem."

Losing passwords due to a death is not unheard of, say cyber locksmiths. But more frequent, says Steve Weiss, president of Password Crackers Inc. in North Potomac, Md., are calls from companies where a disgruntled employee left the firm and refused to disclose passwords.

Weiss believes he can crack the library's database with little difficulty. The basic encryption for dBase files is wide open, he says. He guesses he could gain access in a few minutes and would charge only about $40. Even if the compiler had used a different encryption, Weiss believes the job could be accomplished.

"Death is rarely the cause of losing passwords, although we did have a network administrator hit by a bus," Weiss quipped.

In that case I will be looking both ways, especially when jaywalking!

Amazing performance from a pre-HBO Lauren Ambrose can't save Swimming from drowning in tedium

film

Steven Lindsey writes about film and television for Qtexas. He may be reached by e-mail at Qtexeditor@aol.com

Swimming

Film Grade: C
Lauren Ambrose Acting Grade: A

Starring: Lauren Ambrose, Jennifer Dundas Lowe, Joelle Carter and Jamie Harrold

Directed by: Robert J. Siegel

Running Time: 98 minutes

Not Rated

Opens today at the Angelika Film Center in Dallas. Watch for other Texas cities later this summer.

Long before her debut on the quirky TV masterpiece Six Feet Under, little Lauren Ambrose was doing a little lesbian experimentation — onscreen, that is. In fact, if you like the angst and sensibility that she brings to her Claire Fisher character, then you may want to dive right into Swimming. However, if you're looking for something entertaining, you may want to see Spider-Man for a fifth time instead.

The true evidence that this film didn't have much chance of seeing the light of day (or should I say the "dark of theater") is the fact that the new release was already "in the can" way back in 2000. If anything, Ambrose's newfound celebrity from SFU is probably the only reason they dusted off the print and actually made copies. But I can't hardly blame them. Despite a blah storyline, Ambrose brings teenage social anxiety to deliriously intoxicating levels. It's fun just to watch her slouch through every scene with perfect-pitch precision. Woe is her.

But before I get too caught up in my admiration of Ambrose, I should probably get to the movie itself. And in case you're afraid of getting this confused with the other lesbian coming-of-age movie with the word "swim" in the title, I'll give you two dead giveaways — Girls Can't Swim is in French, while Swimming focuses more on french fries. This is because Frankie Wheeler (Ambrose) and her brother Neil (Josh Pais) have inherited the family's hamburger restaurant after her parents decided to move away from Myrtle Beach to retire in the hot Arizona desert. Even though she's a 50/50 partner, her brother runs the business like a dictator, and mousy Frankie just sits back and endures the condescension. Of course, this is a theme in her life to date: playing Sonny to everybody else's Cher.

Frankie's best friend, Nicola (Jennifer Dundas Lowe), runs the body-piercing parlor next door. Loud, brash and screaming for attention at every instance, she makes it even easier for Frankie to fade into the background. However, when two new people roll into town for the summer season, the world for these two best friends turns upside-down. Heath (Jamie Harrold), a goofy-but-cute guy who sells tie-dye shirts out of his van, and Josee (Joelle Carter), a buxom head-turner who becomes the world's worst waitress at Wheelers, both set their intentions on Frankie. Motivated by jealousy as her timid friend becomes the center of attention, Nicola sets out to prove to Frankie that these new friends are just taking advantage of her innocence.

I don't know if it's just me, but the synopsis sounds much more interesting in print than the plot plays out on the screen. It's not that the movie's bad as much as it's just plain average. Even the extremely mild moments of lesbianism are timid by most standards, and so fleeting that they're not really a big focus of the film.

We've seen about 13 million ugly duckling teen dramas over the past few months or so, making the concept neither original nor intriguing. At least we're spared the typical musical montage of her transformation into a beautiful swan.

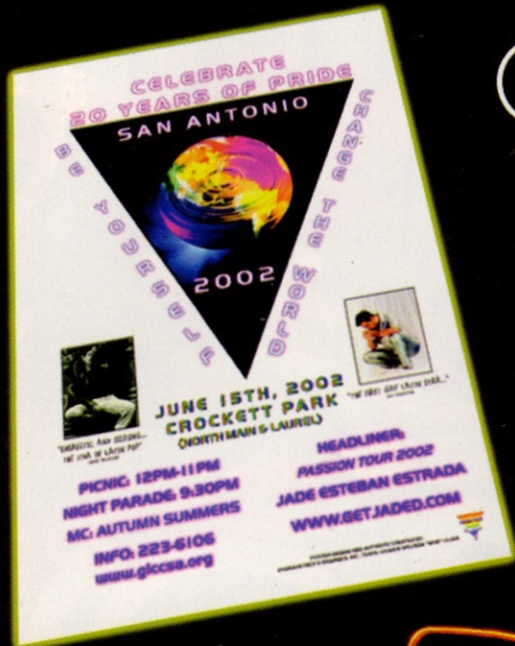

What is special, as I've already stressed early on, is Ambrose. Perhaps I'm jaded because of my extreme fondness of her character and the entire cast of Six Feet Under, but I find her utterly fascinating. Sure, she's already in her early twenties, but she plays teenagers to perfection. She must have some tremendously devastating high school social traumas to draw on for inspiration. And if she doesn't, she's an even better actress than I ever suspected.

I must admit that I don't know many people who would be interested in any actor to endure the tedium that is Swimming. But the best news of all is that yet another swim-titled movie is set for release this summer: Swimfan. It sounds like a generic teen horror flick, but at least I know it's going to feature hot young hunks walking around in Speedos. (I've seen the publicity stills.) And with the promise of that, who needs a plot?

A Daddy's Day Reminder

Just because you already have a father doesn't mean a boy can't have a daddy too!

now, daddies aren't biological fathers, but that doesn't mean they shouldn't be treated special on "Daddy's Day". A daddy is just what every boy needs. (And we're talking about adults here before you go getting any strange ideas). Daddies can be warm and loving, but know how to dish out a little discipline when a boy gets out of line. They can be sensitive to a boy's feelings, but firm when it comes to a boy's training. They are great to cuddle with on a cold night, and fun to play with in a hot dungeon! Sitting on a Daddy's knee can be fun, but bending over it can be better! And all those chores you hated to do around the house for your real father, just become a lot more fun when it's for your daddy.

So for all the boys (and "bois") out there, remember your hard working daddy this Daddy's Day. Above all, just think about what will make your father or Daddy the most proud! With any luck, Daddy will sit you back, hold your hands tight, and show you his appreciation. To help you get started, here are a few ideas for both your biological father and your daddy!

FOR YOUR FATHER

- Getting him a tie
- Polishing his boots
- Serving him a nice juicy steak
- Getting him a box of cigars
- Cleaning up his workbench
- Taking him out for a drink at his favorite bar
- Taking him out to a ball game
- Giving him a big bottle of Scotch
- Purchase him a new dinner jacket
- Buying him a box of candy
- Make him a "Happy Father's Day" Card
- Throw him a barbecue
- Give his car a quality lube & tune
- Recall times over a glass of iced tea
- Get him a Coors Silver Bullet Six Pack
- His Favorite movie on DVD
- Set up his new Surround Sound
- Letting him know how much you love him

FOR YOUR DADDY

- 1. Getting tied up by him
- 2. Polishing his boots...with your tongue
- 3. Serving his nice juicy piece of meat
- 4. Getting him a box of cigars!
- 5. Cleaning his tool...
- 6. Taking him out for a drink...at the leather bar
- 7. Staying in and playing ball games
- 8. Giving him a big bottle of lube
- 9. Get him a new leather jacket
- 10. Buying him a box of candy flavored condoms
- 11. Make him a "Happy Daddy's Day" Card
- 12. Ask him to beat you with a copy of this Q
- 13. Ask him to give you a quality lube & tune
- 14. Call the count while bent over his knee
- 15. Let him help you use your silver bullet
- 16. A session of CBT
- 17. Give him a vibrating sound
- 18. Letting him know how much you love him

Steamy studs in the great outdoors

Latest in 'Sexpack' series delivers with variety of one-on-one and solo scenes

splat

by matt brady

Raging Stallion Studios says it's trying to become a leader in the "outdoor sex" genre — you didn't know such a genre existed? — and to prove it, the latest in its famous "Sexpack" series, Sexpack Eight: Sky's the Limit is filmed almost entirely outdoors in beautiful Northern California settings.

Once again Raging Stallion turns to its stable of dependable studs — including GayVN Performer of the Year Michael Brandon, former Zeus Boy of the Year Robert Black and current Zeus Boy Sky Donovan, the "Sky" of the title. Into this mix veteran director Chris Ward tosses body-beautiful Rik Jammer, amazing bottom Mark Evrett, tattooed hardbody Titus Drum and clean-cut newcomer Andy Hunter.

A "director's cut" — which we viewed — features enthusiastic bottom-boy Donovan sinking down on some enormous dildoes and a fist, and an amazing self-fisting scene by Evrett. Alas, these segments will be cut from the rental version (which is still worth watching), but can be ordered direct from the studio (ordering information is available on the facing page).

As scene one — "Black Sky Fantasy" — gets underway, the video takes too long a time to get going, with teasing shots of Donovan pleasuring himself in a loft. The smooth-chested blond is jacking off to porn and letting his fantasies run astray — and dreaming up daddy Robert Black in the process. Black watches his prey from the shadows then moves slowly, teasingly closer, until Donovan is on all fours, polishing Daddy's boots before moving up to swallow his handsome cock. Black then positions Donovan just right before plowing his tongue into the famous bottom's voluptuous hole before throwing him a rough pounding, with the scene ending as both studs cum all over each other.

The mail-order version adds a gentle but thorough fisting by Black, who gently but repeatedly eases his hand into Donovan's hole then withdraws it all the way before plunging back in. Donovan, on hands and knees, suppresses his obvious discomfort and does Daddy's bidding.

Scene two, "Fucking in the Forest," features massively endowed, black-haired, blue-eyed Michael Brandon and newcomer Titus Drum — hairy and muscled and sporting a few days' growth on his chin. Drum proves that both his holes are equally deep, taking Brandon's monster all the way down his throat before giving himself up to one of Brandon's characteristic no-holds-barred power fucks as Drum winces and yells through the ordeal.

In a rocky, dried-up riverbed, Mark Evrett launches scene three, "Desert Dreams," by jacking off in the great outdoors. Eventually he goes inside a stark brick room, where he fists himself in an amazing display of dexterity and sexual virtuosity, repeatedly popping his hand in and out of his own hole.

"Late Afternoon on a Hilltop," scene four, is a departure as bottom Donovan turns SM top, delivering a lashing to a tied-up and studly Rik Jammer. Donovan works on Jammer's back for a long time with a flogger before moving to his front side. He sucks the bound Jammer to hardness then steps back to deliver lash after lash to Jammer's glowing-red cock. Finally Donovan finishes off the blowjob and leaves Jammer hanging, alone and smarting in the wilderness.

Once again it's time for Donovan to shine in scene five, "Sky at Play," with the perfectly-sculpted stud taking his turn with one huge dildo that's eventually substituted with an ever bigger one.

Scene six (actually billed as the second part of scene five) finds Sky in the forest chopping wood when Andy Hunter comes to give him a hand. After some mutual cocksucking, Donovan again gets plowed by Hunter's not-so-thick but impressively long piece.

Sky Donovan has certainly made a name for himself — and in barely a year in the porn business. His handsome, innocent good looks, perfectly developed hard body and legendary skills as a bottom have brought him a long way. But it's still hard to take your eyes off Brandon — and although he appears only once in a film designed as a showcase for Donovan, it's easy to see why Michael was named Performer of the Year.

Stardate

by rev. bill w

Gemini (May 21-June 21) Last week's eclipse that took place in your sign is still doing a number on your nerves and wallet. Finances look very unpredictable over the next couple of weeks, so curb that urge to spend on frivolous items. It wouldn't hurt to schedule a full-body massage either. That poor body is tense from head to toe.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Enjoy the relative calm and harmony this week has to offer, because next week the pace picks up dramatically. Tensions on the job should be calming down somewhat now. The boss is in a better space, so it's a good time to ask for that raise. Force yourself to get out and socialize this weekend.

Leo (July 23-August 22) Those sleep patterns are a total shambles, probably due to concerns over a nagging legal matter. Stop freaking out before your health becomes affected, Leo. Reach out to family and friends now, instead of pushing them away. An interesting business proposal has the makings of a winner, but needs more work.

Virgo (August 23-September 22) Major victories this week come only from keeping calm and standing your ground. Don't allow the competition or anyone else to rattle your cage. Some of those ideas you come up with might be a bit different, but they'll pay off at some point in time. Allow your creative/artistic side to mushroom.

Libra (September 23-October 22) Ever hear the expression "silence is golden," Libra? This week it will hold particularly true for you, especially regarding intense family matters. Offer up your opinion only if it's requested. Arrange to sleep at a friend's place Saturday night. A favor you did gets paid back in a most unusual way.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) So many wonderful men out there for the choosing and not nearly enough time, right Scorp? Isn't it time to begin narrowing down the list of eligible guys? You're ready to commit. It's just a matter of finding someone who's perfect for you. We sense it's either the Taurus or the Capricorn you've spotted.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21) You'll be busy as a bee for the next few weeks and loving every minute of it. Put every extra dollar toward that August vacation getaway (after all, first class is the only way to go, right?). A sweet fling makes next week so much sweeter. Contacts at a distance offer you much help.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19) Financial projects that have been moving at a snail's pace pick up considerable speed as the week ends. Prepare yourself for a whirlwind of activities and an out-of-town trip next week. Your significant other needs a bit of extra space right now. Allow this and everything will be OK by month's end.

Aquarius (January 20-February 18) The weekend looks particularly joyous, even though there won't be much money to party with. No matter. Life's simplest pleasures tend to be the sweetest (and free). That being said, you might want to throw a yard sale with a neighbor or two. That way, you not only have some fun but end up with extra greenbacks.

Pisces (February 19-March 20) Possessing all of the intuition in the world does no good if it's not paid attention to, Pisces. Decide with the gut instead of your ego. Don't lend out any money or perform large favors, if you're not in the mood. If you feel like being a hermit this weekend, please do so. Just let a few close friends know.

Aries (March 21-April 19) Much of this week may feel like an assault on the senses. Your intuition should be greatly heightened, so it's important to take off for some quality alone time. Offer your shoulder to cry on for a sibling who needs it. An old but minor financial hassle crops up as the week concludes. It'll pass rather quickly.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The 14th and 15th look extremely challenging, especially where career matters are concerned. After that, the week is a relative breeze. Don't apologize for stating your beliefs or telling the truth. Take off Sunday and just have fun. You don't do this often enough, and it's one of the reasons you've been so moody.
